

OREGON STATE FAIR PUBLIC SAFETY FACT SHEET

- The Oregon State Fair's ultimate goal is the safety, comfort and peace-of-mind of Fairgoers, volunteers, exhibitors and employees.
- The Fair's first line of defense when it comes to public safety is the wellknown concept of SEE SOMETHING, SAY SOMETHING. Security personnel depend on the observations of the public to help maintain the peace.
- The Fair employs law enforcement professionals with a combined 53 years of law enforcement experience – including at the U.S. Army and Marion County Sheriff's Office —as its co-heads of security, who oversee and coordinate all aspects of public safety.
- The Fair contracts with a professional crowd management/security company with a large, uniformed staff to help maintain a safe environment during Fairtime—using radios to remain in constant contact with the dispatch center.
- The Oregon State Police operate a dispatch center on the Fairgrounds during the Fair.
- Oregon State Troopers are stationed at every entrance to the Fair, keeping a watchful eye on everything and everyone entering or leaving the Fairgrounds.
- Oregon State Troopers patrol in pairs, constantly moving throughout all areas of the Fairgrounds.
- The Fair conducts bag checks and metal detector screenings at every entrance to search for weapons and other prohibited items.
- Consistent with Oregon law, citizens with a valid permit are allowed to carry concealed weapons onsite. If gate security cannot verify that the permit is valid, those citizens will not be allowed onsite with their concealed weapons.
- The Fair uses a CODE ADAM protocol to respond to lost children on the Fairgrounds—a missing child safety program widely used in the U.S. and Canada for more than two decades.
- Adults bringing children to the Fair are advised to snap a photo of the child or children as they prepare to enter, importantly showing the clothes and shoes being worn that day.
